43	44
Would you rather be chased by one giant candy corn or fifty tiny gummy worms?	Would you rather have a witch turn your hair green or a wizard make your socks invisible?
45	46
Would you rather ride in a shopping cart pushed by a ghost or a wagon pulled by three cats?	Would you rather tell jokes to a serious gargoyle or sing to a bored skeleton?

47	48
Would you rather have a pumpkin head for one hour or broomstick arms for ten minutes?	Would you rather find out your teacher is a friendly vampire or your neighbor is a retired wizard?
49	50
Would you rather wear a cape that always blows dramatically or shoes that leave glowing footprints?	Would you rather compete in a monster talent show or judge a ghost baking contest?
51	52
Would you rather hear footsteps in an empty hallway or see a light turn on in an empty room?	Would you rather spend ten minutes in a silent attic or ten minutes in a foggy garden?
53	54
Would you rather open a box that whispers your name or a book that writes a new sentence by itself?	Would you rather follow glowing footprints or a trail of floating leaves?
55	56
Would you rather hear a clock strike thirteen or see a portrait wink?	Would you rather cross a creaky bridge at midnight or walk through a corn maze at sunset?
57	58
Would you rather have one candle relight itself or one window keep opening on its own?	Would you rather discover that the suit of armor moved or that the old piano played one note?
59	60
Would you rather receive a letter from the future or a map drawn by someone from the past?	Would you rather stay in a lighthouse during a storm or a mountain lodge during heavy fog?
61	62
Would you rather meet a ghost who only speaks in riddles or a statue that only answers yes-or-no questions?	Would you rather investigate a locked greenhouse or an unused train station?

63	64
Would you rather hear your name carried by the wind or see it written briefly in the mist?	Would you rather find a key with no lock or a door with no handle?
65	66
Would you rather notice every mirror is covered or every clock has stopped?	Would you rather explore a maze with a lantern or a castle with a map?
67	68
Would you rather spend the night in a museum or an old hotel?	Would you rather see a shadow move without its owner or hear a bell ring without a rope?
69	70
Would you rather discover a hidden room behind your closet or a tunnel beneath your backyard?	Would you rather guard a mysterious package until sunrise or deliver it to a house with no address?
71	72
Would you rather solve why a town has no reflections or why its streetlights blink in order?	Would you rather find a staircase that leads to yesterday or an elevator button marked "tomorrow"?
73	74
Would you rather hear a music box in the next room or a typewriter upstairs?	Would you rather follow a talking raven or trust a compass that points toward secrets?
75	76
Would you rather be the first person to enter a haunted house or the last person to leave?	Would you rather have a friendly ghost help with chores or a tiny witch help with homework?
77	78
Would you rather dress as an animal or a storybook character?	Would you rather draw a smiling monster or build a cardboard castle?

79	80
Would you rather find a purple pumpkin or a blue apple?	Would you rather hop like a frog witch or flap like a sleepy bat?
81	82
Would you rather make a paper ghost or a sock puppet monster?	Would you rather have a lunchbox shaped like a pumpkin or a backpack shaped like a cat?
83	84
Would you rather decorate one classroom door or every desk?	Would you rather read a funny monster book or watch a friendly ghost cartoon?
85	86
Would you rather win a sticker or choose the next Halloween song?	Would you rather play pumpkin bowling or monster freeze dance?
87	88
Would you rather paint a pumpkin or decorate a paper mask?	Would you rather wear striped witch socks or fuzzy werewolf slippers?
89	90
Would you rather discover a tiny ghost in your pencil case or a talking spider in your notebook?	Would you rather have a broom that cleans your room or a cauldron that makes hot chocolate?
91	92
Would you rather tell a silly riddle or act out a funny monster?	Would you rather trick-or-treat with three friends or attend a family costume party?
93	94
Would you rather give away the first piece of candy or save the last piece for someone else?	Would you rather create a monster with three eyes or a robot with six arms?

95	96
Would you rather turn into a cat for an afternoon or an owl for one evening?	Would you rather have a jack-o'-lantern night-light or glow-in-the-dark stars?
97	98
Would you rather find the easiest clue first or the hardest clue last?	Would you rather lead a parade or carry the parade sign?
99	100
Would you rather make up a ghost name or invent a new monster sound?	Would you rather build a blanket cave or a cardboard haunted house?
101	102
Would you rather count candy pieces or sort costume accessories?	Would you rather play on a team with your teacher or your best friend?
103	104
Would you rather wear a glowing bracelet or carry a glowing lantern?	Would you rather have a pumpkin-shaped eraser or a bat-shaped pencil topper?
105	106
Would you rather end a Halloween story with a surprise party or a hidden treasure?	Would you rather plan the party playlist or organize all the games?
107	108
Would you rather create a costume from thrift-store finds or everyday items at home?	Would you rather solve a team escape puzzle or compete in a trivia final?
109	110
Would you rather watch one suspenseful movie or three short monster comedies?	Would you rather be known for the best costume or the best party idea?

111	112
Would you rather take photos in a decorated booth or make a short Halloween skit?	Would you rather host a mystery dinner or a flashlight scavenger hunt?
113	114
Would you rather write the clues or hide them?	Would you rather spend the evening telling stories or playing competitive games?
115	116
Would you rather design a haunted attraction or direct a monster movie?	Would you rather join a costume group with one theme or wear a completely original costume?
117	118
Would you rather have thirty minutes to decorate a room or thirty minutes to invent a game?	Would you rather attend a quiet mystery night or a loud costume dance?
119	120
Would you rather receive a difficult riddle or a misleading treasure map?	Would you rather choose a costume nobody recognizes or the same costume as someone else?
121	122
Would you rather be the game host or a player in every round?	Would you rather have unlimited decorations or unlimited snacks for the party?
123	124
Would you rather spend Halloween without a phone or without candy?	Would you rather enter a lip-sync contest in costume or improvise a one-minute ghost story?
125	126
Would you rather discover the mystery's solution early or remain surprised until the end?	Would you rather plan a party for six close friends or sixty classmates?

127	128
Would you rather wear a very clever costume that is uncomfortable or a simple costume that feels comfortable all night?	Would you rather make the decorations by hand or design digital invitations?
129	130
Would you rather choose the theme without a budget or receive a large budget for a theme someone else chose?	Would you rather win every game quietly or lose the final round in a hilarious way?
131	132
Would you rather know every answer in Halloween trivia but never play, or host the game without seeing the answer sheet?	Would you rather have the perfect costume arrive one day late or wear an unfinished costume on time?
133	134
Would you rather solve a mystery with no clues or follow clues without knowing the mystery?	Would you rather explore a haunted house that changes rooms or a corn maze that changes paths?
135	136
Would you rather have ten minutes to hide every clue or ten minutes to find them all?	Would you rather repeat your favorite Halloween tradition forever or try a completely different tradition every year?
137	138
Would you rather receive one perfect treat or a bag of mystery treats?	Would you rather remember every scary story you hear or forget every movie ending before watching it?
139	140
Would you rather be able to pause time during a party game or replay one turn?	Would you rather know which costume will win or choose the contest category?
141	142
Would you rather spend Halloween with perfect weather and no decorations or heavy rain and amazing decorations indoors?	Would you rather have a magic lantern that reveals hidden messages or a key that opens one unknown door?

143	144
Would you rather be excellent at solving riddles or impossible to fool in a mystery game?	Would you rather create the funniest question of the night or give the most surprising answer?
145	146
Would you rather let the group choose your costume or let them choose every game?	Would you rather face one genuinely difficult choice or answer twenty easy questions in a row?
147	148
Would you rather end the party while everyone is still having fun or add one final unplanned game?	Would you rather change your answer after hearing the group or defend your first choice?
149	150
Would you rather play only with people who agree with you or with people who choose the opposite option every time?	Would you rather keep the winning vote secret until the end or reveal the result after every question?
